

WHEN Washington can begin a week of entertainment with one party of distinguished foreigners and before their plaudits have died away receive another, life cannot be called dull at the capital. Seldom has a more interesting man come as the guest of the nation than Dr. Baltasar Brum, minister for foreign affairs of Uruguay, and his brilliant speech made at the banquet which he gave at the Pan-American building just before his departure, as well as his entire visit, did much to cement the friendship between his country and the United States. The visit of the Greek archbishop and Mr. N. G. Kryiakndes, while less auspicious, still brings a better understanding between their country and ours and will also give occasion for pleasant exchange of hospitalities between the legation of Greece and officials of Washington.

WOMEN are slowly, very slowly, returning to Washington from their all too brief vacations and are taking up their Red Cross work with renewed and redoubled energy. Mrs. Lansing, wife of the Secretary of State, immediately plunged into the workrooms in H street, where the State Department unit of the Red Cross carries on its voluminous work, and with Mrs. Daniels, Mrs. Lane and Miss Agnes Hart Wilson forms a more than representative body of cabinet women at the capital.

ADDED to the great body of woman war workers last week was Mrs. Howard Gould, national secretary of the Woman's Association of Commerce of the United States of America, who came to launch a tirade against the absurdities of women's attire and to decree that no longer shall our girls wear Louis XVI heels on up-to-date American shoes and to be worn with any sort of gorgeous style of gown evolved from the "milly-willy"—as Mrs. Gould puts it—brains of men. Miss Florence King, national president, who accompanied Mrs. Gould to Washington, will give to womanhood a record in keeping with the vital work to be performed by them in connection with the war. Without consulting President Wilson and other lovers of the game, Mrs. Gould also advocates turning golf courses into war gardens, a suggestion made a year and more ago, which was completely lost sight of from the fact the courses were not really needed.

ENGAGEMENTS and weddings also held their usual interest in the social world, and the announcement that brought the greatest surprise was that of the marriage of Miss Margaret Van N. Denys, youngest daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. F. Ward Denys, to Lieut. Stanley H. Walcott. Mrs. Walcott is a charming young person and just such a girl as one would select for a war-time romance. She will join her young bridegroom here tomorrow and continue a honeymoon interrupted by a lengthy visit to her parents at Bar Harbor. The engagement of Miss Charlotte Palmer Capers to Mr. Robert Ash of Buffalo, but now living in Washington, and that of Miss Fannie Chamberlain to Mr. Horace W. Tevis of Portland were both pleasant bits of news. Miss Chamberlain, course, be married in Washington, and the wedding of Miss Chamberlain and Mr. Tevis may also take place here in the early winter, if not in Oregon in the early fall.

THE numerous brilliant events to benefit the Red Cross or some special line of war work at all of the larger resorts are fast dwindling to smaller card parties, farewell dinner parties, jaunts over the mountains or casual visits at the seashore, and before the week ends almost one-half of Washington's social world will be making its annual fall trip to the Adirondacks or White mountains, and those at Blue Ridge Summit and in that vicinity will settle down to a few weeks of quiet enjoyment before returning to town.

The Secretary of State and Mrs. Lansing were hosts at dinner last evening for the minister from the United States to Sweden, Mr. J. H. M. Malmgren, and his wife. Mrs. Malmgren will remain here for a short time and have taken the residence of Dr. and Mrs. W. W. Richardson on Grand road.

Mr. William Gibbs McAdoo, the Secretary of the Treasury, who is spending the week end at White Sulphur Springs with Mrs. McAdoo, will remain over for the night.

Mr. and Mrs. George Lawrence Wilkinson of Evanston, Ill., announce the engagement of their daughter, Frances and Ensign Arthur Hugh Bunker, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Raymond Bunker of York, Pa. Miss Wilkinson, who is the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Wilkinson of this city, and also the granddaughter of Col. and Mrs. B. A. Enloe of Nashville, Tenn., made her debut here last season and was ranked immediately among the beauties of the winter.

She has traveled extensively and is as cultivated as she is charming. Mrs. Wilkinson and her daughter spent the winter at the Hotel Lafayette and following the departure of the former for Evanston Miss Wilkinson remained on here until a short time ago, engaged in Red Cross work to which she has devoted practically all of her time.

Mrs. Alexander Clark of Paris, at whose house in the Avenue Henri Martin so many Washington society people have been entertained, has the Profile House, White mountains, by automobile and will divide the winter between Washington and the Waldorf in New York.

The Episcopal ceremony was performed by an assistant rector of St. Thomas Church, who acted for the rector, Rev. Dr. Stiles.

The bride was gowned in white satin adorned with pearls, her tulle veil being adjusted with clusters of pearls in place of orange blossoms. She carried orchids and lilies of the valley. There were no attendants and no wedding breakfast followed the ceremony. The young couple will make their home in Washington.

Clarence Wise, also formerly of Washington, officiated.

The bride wore a gracefully constructed gown of white georgette crepe, made short and worn with a short bridal veil of tulle adjusted with orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of white roses. Attending her was her small cousin, Eleanor Rutan Christie of Newark, N. J., who wore a dainty frock of pink chiffon and carried a leghorn hat filled with pink flowers.

The best man was the bride's brother, Corp. Ralph Nelson Stoddard, United States Signal Corps. Two of the Washington friends of the bride, Mrs. Charles Flora and Miss Edna Morgan, gave the program of music, Mrs. Flora playing the wedding march and Miss Morgan giving vocal numbers from famous composers. Lieut. and Mrs. Huntington will go to Little Rock, Ark., after a short wedding journey, the bride being newly assigned post of the bridegroom.

Among those from Washington who went to Baltimore for the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Wolfe, Mrs. Louis Glaser, Miss Florence Conger, Mr. Frank Conger, Miss Kate Spencer and Miss Flora Bankin.
